SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON.

For June 22, "Temperance Lesson." (Romans xiii, 8-14.)

suspending its studies in the life of Paul, has directed us to a passage in one of Paul's letters. Many will regret this. The charm and fascination in the wonderful story makes one desire to follow it continnously. And yet, the theme of our present lesson is always interesting and important. Besides, the committee, responding to nu-merous petitions, has felt obliged once each year to give a temperance lesson. That subject enters here in its usual biblical way, as a part of a more extended thought. Let temperance always appear in its rela-way, as a part of a more extended thought. Let temperance always appear in its relation to other great virtueat.

PAUL—The nuther of the book from which the lesson is taken was a man of great learning. (Acts xxii, 30.) Raised a Pharisee (Acts, xxvi, 5), he early imbiled the feelings of hespitality toward Christians. Converted while on his way to Damascus (Acts, ix. 1—19), he became an earnest advocate of the causa which he had so hitterly opposed. The twelve men whom Jesus called to be apostles, having devoted themselves to the ministry among the Jews. Paul was chosen by the Holy Ghost to be the apostle of the Gentiles. (Acts ix. 15.) For that service be was qualified by visions and revelations (II Cor. Xii. 1—10), which added to his matural and acquired talents, placed him in the front rank among ministers (II Cor. Xi. 5), and gave him a commanding influence in the church. Solemnly set apart at Anticole (Acts, xii.), he went westward on a series of missionary tours, proaching and establishing churches. But because he was not one of the original twelve, neither a personal acquaintance of Jesus, and because his views were peculiar, he was regarded with suspicion by many and compelled to assert and defend his authority. His writings constitute the largest section of the New Testament.

ROMANS—Paul wrote thirteen leiters, some say fourteen, the book of Hebrews largest section of the New Testament.

ROMANS-Paul wrotes, the book of Hebrews being in dispute. The one before we is the being in dispute. The one before we is the being in dispute. The one before we is the being in dispute. The one before we is the being in dispute. The one before we is the being in dispute. The one before we is the being in dispute. The one before we is the being in dispute. The one of his way to Spain (Rom. xv. 26), he desired to pause there and render some service. (Rom. 1, 11.) He had many friends in the imperial city (see chapter xvi), whom he was anxious to meet. That the way might be prepared for his visit he wrote this letter and sent it by the hand of Phebe. It is the most elaborate of all his writings. Godet calls if "the cathedral of the Christian faith." Coleridge says, "It is the profoundest book in existence." A whole library has been written in its exposition. Some of its statements cover the vastest themes that ever engaged the mind of man. Here is the buttle ground of Protestant sects. The letter contains Paul's idea of the gospel, its obief theme being "justification by faith." The first claven chapters are dootrinal and they form the secure basis for the practical directions contained in the closing chapters.

To appreciate the full force of the seven verses that form our lesson one needs to read at least the entire practical part of the epistle, chapters xil—xv. In this way only may we obtain the sweep and swing of the thought of this great man; still, there are three points which may be profitably considered, even though detached from all that preceded and followed.

NEW LAW—In verses 8, 9 and 10 the apositions love as the Christian rule of life. In another place (a. life, 1), the declares that Christians are taught of the growth of the g was toward a better state; that the outcome would be to the glory of God. (Phil. it. II.) With the prophets every dark picture was I ahted up by the promise of Messiah. (Mai. jv. 2, 2) With the apostles there was the expectation that Jesus would come again di Tim, iv. 8.) Not the least of the services rendered by prophets and apostles was the awakening of hope in minds that otherwise might have been filled with despit. So in the lesson Paul calls attention to the pectod in which he lived. "The night"—the time of darkness and ignorance, of sin and oppression—"is far sperit." The day is at hand—the time of light, of joy, and good will is being ushered in. He would have the Roman Christians realize that they were enteriors upon a new era, which Aben. entering upon a new era, which Abra-(John vill, 55), and Zacharias (Luke I.

good will is being ushered in, its would have the Roman Christians realize that they were entering upon a new era, which Abrahan Gohn vill, 50, and Zacharlas (Luke I. 75, though separated by centuries, rejeleed to see hie desired them to know their exalted privileges, as children of the day of Them. v. 1—5, and cake special attention to the fact that they had made saidtual progress since they first believed (II Cor. vi. 2), an earnest of what they might expect. That they might be prepared for this new time (Heb. Iv. 7), he exhorts them to awake out of sleep Eph. v. 14), to shake off the stuper that had settled down upon the carnal world, and bring into fullest activity all of their redeemed powers.

NEW WALE, Cyerses 12 to 18.) The aborde next exhibits the conduct becoming to a Christian in this new day. That conduct he sails a walk, a favorite expression, used by him thirty times in his opisities, also by the other sacred writers. (Gen. v. 2; 1. John I. J. The follower of Jesus is not a permanent due for the re (Heb. xill; 14), but he is on a journey through these earlily relations to an eternal home. Neither is he expected to remain in a fixed type of character, but to be continually advancing (Phil., ill, 10). Both of these ideas are beautifully expressed by the term "walk." a progress, step by step, little by little, toward a goal. Obristian living is here presented under two heads, negatively and positively, what is improper and ought to be shunned, what is proper and ought to be shunned, what is proper and ought to be shunned under two heads, negatively and positively, what is improper and ought to be shunned what is proper and ought to be character in the former day cannot be tolerated in this. (Eph. v. 5: I Cor. vi. 9, 10). What deeds. He charmerates "riotins, drunkenness, chambering, wantonness, atrife and envying." each of which subjects would repay careful and prolonsed study. All Christians are expressed to be free from those and to rear in the world of sin, constantly exposed to adventually account

(Gal., v. 16.)

1. Nearly nineteen centuries have passed away since Paul wrote. The day, then underling in, has advanced toward high noon. The spreading rays of light then streaking the East, pour down their effulgence on helf the globe. Much more etarnestly ought ewery trade follower of Christ awake and resolve. 2. But, slass many of the evil practices, then considered out of place, as belonging to a former era, still linger. "Rioting, drunkenness, chambering." the long catalogue in sickening detail disgracees our civilization. The drink habit, the saloon, the house of shame, the low theater, the price fight, the gambling den, all pander to the lower nature. Men of God, set your faces against these things. 2. A clarion voice ought to go through the land proclaiming with apostolle force the law of love and the life of purity. Speed ye on, ye regenerating force of the gospel. (Eph. iv, 24.) Conclusion.

REPUBLICANS IN A WRANGLE. Committeemen Quarrel Over Conven-

The feeling across the river between the administration and antiadministration or Cullom wing in Republican circles, evi-denced in much intenseness prior to the Cullom wing in Republican circles, evidenced in much intensoness prior to the State Convention, is being worked up ngain in the Forty-reventh Senatorial District to strengthen the chances of the candidates.

Trouble has arisen in the senatorial committee over the calling of the convention, and the members, E. A. Keller of Edwardsville, representing Madison County, and J. M. Appel, Committeeman from Bond, are at ours, with no signs of a settlement. Mr. Keller, who is a warm personal friend of Senator Wm. E. Maron, proposes to call the convention for July 2 at Alton. Mr. Appel, on the contrary, is credited with a desire to have the meeting at some town along the Vandaia, Colinsville or Highland preferred. Mr. Appel is an apportise of Governor Yates and a close frimd of Cleero J. Lindley, and favors the candidacy of Captain I. W. Cook of Troy.

Mr. Keller is a supporter of Louis Walter, the Aiton glassblower, who is now in the lower house of the State Legislature. He was not recognized in the Granite Cliy convention, when Captain Briesgemann's resitution in favor of Mason was howied down to the Senator's very face. The belief of this wing is that if the convention is taken to Alton, Whiter's home town, he would stand an excellent chance, and they are considered or darrying their point.

Mr. Keller and Last night: "Mr. Appel and I have not been able to airree upon the convention question, and I have desided to name Alton and July 2 as the time and place. I have written to Mr. Appel to that effect, and if he does not agree I shall take the responsibility upon myself and personally issue the call within a few days."

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE TO MEET Will Organize To-Day for Congressionni Campaign.

Members of the Democratic Congressional Committee of the Twenty-second Congressional District will meet in the office of Attorney Maurice V. Joyce in the Jackiesch building on Missouri avenue this morning and organize for the coming campaign. The campaign this year is to be a vigorous one, and an early start will be made. Leading Democrats do not believe made. Leading Democrats do not believe that the Republicans have succeeded in making tels district Republican by the Inst gerrymander, but they will love no time between now and the day of election.

The delegates and alternates who were selected to represent St. Clair County at the State Convention to be held in Springfield next Tuesday will meet in the City Courtroom in the East St. Louis City Hall this afternoon.

DROWNED WRILE SWIMMING.

Charles Quigley Seized With Cramps in Cahokia Creek. Charles Quigley, 21 years old, a bartender employed at Henenthal's Hotel on Missouri aveiue, East St. Louis, was drowned yes-terday morning while swimming in the Ca-hokia Creek at a point about 160 yards above the Relay Station.

Quigley and several companions were swimming when Quigley suddenly sank. It is supposed that he was selzed with cramps. His body was recovered by Frank Bauer, a pusterer, who dived for it. The body was taken to Benner-Brichler's morgue, where an inquest was held yester-day afternoon. The Coroner's jury re-turned a verdict of accidental drowning.

Burglars Are Persistent.

For the second time within the last six months burgiars visited the Barbour Hard-ware establishment on the East Side. About $150 worth of arms and cutlery and fine tools were stolen. There is no clew to the thieves. The loss is covered by burgiar insurance.

who charged him with larceny as ballee of $100.

Breweries and wholesale liquor dealers on the East Side are in the habit of loaning sums of money to saloonkeepers who do business in the vicinity of the National Stock Yards and the manufacturing plandabout East St. Louis, and who are paid by check. Many of the men have small accounts at these saloons, and when the saloonkeeper cashes the checks, they settle for their weekly or monthly bill. The checks are deposited in bank the next morning and the brewery or wholesaler who has made the loan is reimbursed.

According to the evidence presented at the trial of the case yesterday, Davis had been in the habit of borrowing from $100 to $300 on pay days from Mr. Vogt. A couple of days ago he borrowed $100 and failed to pay back the money. When Mr. Vogt's efforts to collect the amount railed he swore to a warrant charging Davis with larceny as ballee. Justice Driscoll held that the money was simily a long and and the trial of the money was simily a long and and that the money was simily a long and and that the money was simily a long and and the trial of the money was simily a long and and the trial of the money was simily a long and the statem of the salour products.

The Dreadful Inheritance of an Indiana Hotel-Keeper.

For Years He Endeavored to Get Rid of It, But In Vain-How He Finally Met With Success.

Met With Success.

The inheritance of Thomas F. Lawes, proprietor of Hotel Taft, Dunkirk, Ind., was anything but an enviable one. It came to him more than a fecade ago and to get rid of it be tried in vain for many years. How, at last, he succeeded makes an interesting story.

"Until a few years ago," he says, "I was a man to be pitied. For more than ten years I was a parayite, hardly able to use my hands and with my eyes so affected by the disease that I could not recognize my friends across the room. My hands and forearms were so numb that there was scarcely any feeling in them at all."

"You had a doctor?" ventured his interviewer.

"Yes, for a while in 1832, but my condition gradually grew worse. I tried various things, but I didn't get any better and I became pretty well discouraged. The disease is hereditary in the family. One of my sisters died of paralysis and the face of another was all drawn out of shape by it. So, you see, I realized that it would be an almost impossible thing to get rid of it in my case."
